Eastern States Exposition is a not-for-profit corporation committed to excellence in providing year-round opportunities for the development and promotion of agriculture, education, industry and family entertainment while preserving our New England heritage.

Joshua Brooks Facts:

- ❖ Born January 19, 1868 in Brookline, MA
- ❖ Attended Boston University - Captain of the Football Team
- ❖ Founded Brooks Bank Note Company in Boston
- ❖ Moved Family and Company to Springfield in 1898
- ❖ Personal Friend of Teddy Roosevelt!
- ❖ Passion for Agriculture

"If the farmer always sells at wholesale and buys at retail, he wont make a success of his farm and you don't have to be a very acute business man to know that!"

Eastern States Exposition, home of The Big E, has presented the finest livestock, the most innovative commercial, industrial and artistic developments, and the highest caliber of varied entertainment to the people of the Northeastern United States for more than eight decades. More than one million people now attend the 17 day Big E, an annual autumn extravaganza of entertainment, exhibits and agriculture – the culmination of a visionary idea first expressed by Joshua L. Brooks at the beginning of the 20th century.

Brooks knew that farming in New England was on the decline and that production costs were soaring. His hope was to create an Exposition that would provide demonstrations of new farming methods and establish competitive awards which would inspire farmers and their children to produce more efficiently and sponsor cooperative purchasing that would lower the farmers' costs. Above all, Brooks believed in developing and showcasing an agricultural New England.

Working with twelve community leaders, Brooks spearheaded the purchase of 175 acres of former swampland in West Springfield. It took less than eight months to construct the Coliseum and cattle barns. The site was ready.

A group of determined New England businessmen went to Chicago and convinced the executive body of the National Dairy Show to hold their annual extravaganza in West Springfield instead of its traditional home, the Midwest. In 1916, this National Dairy Show was the first event held on the Exposition Grounds. It also marked the first time the show was held east of Chicago.

In the spring of 1917, 122 of the nation's foremost manufacturers presented their products at the Industrial and Export conference in Exposition Park. And, in the fall of that same year, the very first Eastern States Exposition was opened to the public. A total of 138,000 people gathered at what would become an enduring tradition: the annual September event now known as The Big E, "New England's Autumn Tradition." To this day, that tradition has been interrupted only by two World Wars.

New Hampshire Building History

- ❖ Opened on September 16, 1930
- ❖ Cost of $75,000
- ❖ Built of NH Granite!
- ❖ Stock Market crash!

The Avenue of States required FULL participation of all of the New England States to create this permanent exhibition. Each building was deeded to the individual state.

The Eastern States Exposition grounds in general host year-round events like Equine Affaire, Livestock shows, Eastec Engineering, Northeast Gold Wine Competition, Joshua Brooks wanted the Exposition to be a truly regional event. He believed that to achieve this, each of the six New England states should construct a building that could display both its character and its products. The Avenue of the States was born.

Massachusetts contributed a replica of the Boston State House in 1919. This was followed by buildings from Maine and then Vermont. In the 1930's, both New Hampshire and Connecticut contributed their structures and in 1958, Rhode Island finished its building. An interesting fact about this famous Avenue is that each state owns its building and the land the structure is built upon. Thus, visitors to the Exposition can literally stroll through all six New England States. And, as they travel, they can sample both the architectural style and the traditional foods and wares that exemplify each state.

Explore Storrowton Village Museum

Another unique feature of Eastern States Exposition is Storrowton Village Museum, an Early American village of the 1700s and 1800s. In 1926, Boston philanthropist and Exposition trustee Helen Osborne Storrow began her search for an early New England building to house her Home Department at the Exposition.

“No longer is the home department the poor little Cinderella of the Exposition, housed in temporary buildings,” wrote an elated Mrs. Storrow in 1930. This ambitious and generous woman eventually donated nine buildings – each an original structure from the various New England states – that all date between 1767 and 1850. Storrowton is open to visitors year-round as a historical museum and is the site of special events and educational “Living History” programs for school children.

Many of the nation’s finest craftspeople and artisans exhibit their work in Craft Common on the back green of Storrowton Village and along Hampden Avenue. On the Village green, visitors will find 19th century craft demonstrators as well as family entertainment on the gazebo. Traditional Early American crafts and chores are demonstrated within the historic buildings that comprise the Village.

NOTHING COMPARES TO THE FOOD AT THE FAIR.

Here at The Big E, we support farm to fork and deep-fried initiatives. If you can think of something to deep-fry, we've probably done it. Oreos, jelly beans, Kool-Aid – even butter. But fried food is only part of our typical fair cuisine. Classic loaded baked potatoes, BBQ pork, sausage and peppers, and corndogs are on practically every corner. You'll find Mexican, Chinese, Greek, Latin, German, Polish, Italian, and Indian food (and probably something we forgot as well). Top it all off with a signature Big E Cream Puff or Eclair, key-lime-pie-on-a-stick, or simply delicious apple pie ala mode.

If you really want to stay on your diet, you can't go wrong with a salad, smoothie, or a giant turkey leg, which is surprisingly low in calories.

Find a hidden food spot in our food court by the midway, in the all new Wurst Haus by the Student Prince, the new West Side Grille, the Deep South Company, or sit down to a more upscale meal at Storowton tavern.

There is no shortage of tasty temptations at The Big E. Be sure to wash it all down with something refreshing from one of our watering holes like: The Big E Martini Bar, Opa Opa Saloon, V1 Craft Cocktail Bar, Tavern Terrace, Sam Adams Beer Garden, Oktoberfest Munich Style or Guinness Irish Pub.

In 2019...

- 1,629,527 fair-goers
- a new record!
- About 1.4 million visit the
NH Building
- 150 different publications
- 62,000 pieces of literature
distributed

Third largest fair in North America (based on attendance – our grounds are actually smaller than many state fairs)

About 40% of visitors to the NH building are looking for tourism info (about 527,866 people in 2018)

An estimated 90% of fair-goers visit the Avenue of States, according to Big E exit surveys. Most of those (82%) are looking for food and shopping, but a substantial number (38%) are seeking travel information. In real numbers, that's about 1.39 million visitors to the Avenue of States, and 527,866 people who are specifically looking for tourism information. About 75% of those who were looking for travel literature planned to travel to NH after the fair (that's 395,900 guests).
